Mother Nature spares Gallatin

Gallatin County residents breathed sighs of relief Friday evening after it became clear the tornadoes that brought death and destruction to much of this region had spared our county.

Even though there was no damage here, you

Tornadoes bring death, destruction to region didn't have to travel far to see the effects of the worst tornadoes to hit this area since 1974. Six miles across the county line, in Owen County, the home of former Gallatin County residents Tom and Betty Slayback on U. S. 127 was destroyed by one of Friday's many storms.

"My wife and daughter were sitting in our family room and were worried about me because I was down in my shop," said

Tom Slayback on Monday as he sifted through rubble that had been his two-story brick home. "They then heard a loud explosion that was the horse barn across the street being blown apart and then the roof went off our house. My daughter was cut from her toes to her head but she and my wife will be fine. That's the important part."

The deadly outbreak of 46 tornadoes killed 40 people Friday, including 22 in Kentucky and injured about 300. One of the hardest hit areas locally was in southern Kenton County where three died and the small town of Piner was nearly wiped off the map by the storm's fury.

Similar damage was reported near Crittenden in Grant County where a tornado killed more than 10 show-quality quarter horses owned by the McCordle Family. Nearby in Indiana, two people died in Ripley County, four died in Jefferson County, three died in Scott County, one was killed in Clark County and in Washington County four people died.

In the Ripley County town of Hilton, the storm's 165-mph winds slammed into homes and barns and spread misery in its wake. On Monday, residents there and all over the Ohio River Valley began to rebuild their homes and their lives.

Insurance claims from Friday's deadly tornadoes and hailstorms are pouring into Kentucky insurance agents by the thousands. By Monday afternoon, Kentucky Farm Bureau, one of the state's largest insurance companies, had received more than 9,000 claims, said company spokesman Greg Kosse.

"We anticipate that number to go up significantly," Kosse said. "It's too early to put a dollar figure on the destruction because the damage is just so devastating."

Preliminary estimates of damage should be available by the end of the week. Because of the nearly state-wide swath of storm damage, the losses could approach those of the most expensive storms in history. Those include Hurricane Ike in 2008 that cost Kentucky Farm Bureau $125 million, and the winter ice and wind storms in 2009 that brought claims of $200 million to the insurance company.

Many relief agencies are helping care for those who were injured or lost property in the storms. Locally, the Kentucky Farm Bureau office will match any financial donation to the American Red Cross. Contact Rose Sullivan, Mayme Walters or Vesta Moore for more information or call 567-6331.

Additionally, the Sheriff Department is collecting items such as bottled water, cleaning supplies, canned goods and personal hygiene supplies to aid storm victims. Call 567-5751 for information. The Paint Lick Baptist Church will collect relief items this Friday and Saturday from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the church.

Court throws out redistricting plan

Gallatin County will not get a new state senator and representative after all. That's because the state's Supreme Court has ruled the redistricting plan drawn up by the General Assembly is unconstitutional because the new legislative districts didn't comply with the "one person, one vote" mandate in federal and state law.

Redistricting occurs every 10 years to account for population changes reported in the U. S. Census. The latest count found the state's overall population grew from 4 million to 4.3 million between 2000 and 2010, requiring new legislative and congressional district boundaries.

"Yes, I'm still going to represent Gallatin County for at least another year and I'm delighted about that," said State Senator John Schickle, a Republican. The redistricting plan had put Gallatin County in Senator Paul Hornback's 20th District but now the county will remain in Schickle's 11th District.

Schickle will be opposed by Joshua Turner in this spring's Republican Primary election which will take place May 22.

Likewise, Rep. Royce Adams, a Democrat, will continue to represent Gallatin County in the state legislature but only until his term expires this year because of his plans to retire. The redistricting plan had put the county in Rep. Rick Rand's 47th District but instead it will remain in the 61st District.

Time Warner acquires Insight Cable TV

Time Warner Cable announced last week it has acquired Insight Communications, the cable TV, Internet and phone service provider that has served the City of Warsaw and several other communities in Kentucky.

The Insight acquisition added 760,000 customers to Time Warner's Cable operation.

"We are pleased to welcome our new customers, new employees and new communities to Time Warner," said Glenn Britt, CEO of Time Warner Cable. "We're excited to begin building on Insight's success and serving our new customers."

Britt said it would be "business as usual" for former Insight customers as the company begins the day-to-day management of its new areas. He said the transition would be gradual to ensure a positive customer experience. The company plans to introduce advanced, innovative cable products and services later this year and will keep customers informed of these plans

The ball was in Jordan's hands

This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

With one second to go in the game and his team down two points, senior Jordan Morris had the ball in his hands. His Gallatin County Wildcats had been losing by 19 points just six minutes earlier but they had battled back and now Jordan's and his team's future was literally on his fingertips.

A loss in this 8th Region Tournament would mean the end of both Gallatin County's season and Jordan's high school basketball career.

He wasn't the tallest, fastest or strongest player on the team. If the coach could have drawn up the perfect play, Jordan probably wouldn't have wound up with the ball at this critical juncture of the game.

Nonetheless, he had dreamed of a moment like this all of his life. His father and uncle played basketball for the school. His grandfather, David Morris, also played and has been the team's public address announcer for as long as Jordan has been alive.

I've watched Jordan on the basketball court since he was a toddler. Before he was old enough to go to school, Jordan would run onto the court with Gallatin County's varsity as they warmed up before games. He would shag balls for the players and he would shoot when he had the chance.

When Jordan started school, youngsters were allowed to shoot basketballs at halftime of the games. He was always the first one with a ball in his hands. I remember watching him try to put the ball through the hoop when it took both his hands and all his strength just to heave it up to the backboard. He would throw up the ball and then run after it as fast as he could when it hit the floor. Shot after shot, Jordan's enthusiasm and energy never waned.

As he grew older, he eventually gained the strength and expertise to get the ball to and through the rim. I'm sure I saw Jordan take more than a thousand shots during halftimes of the varsity games he and his family attended. The number of shots he took at the goal in his family's driveway probably reached close to a million.

Although a steady player, Jordan wasn't considered one of the team's stars. He wasn't tall, fast or quick enough to fit into that category.

But that wasn't important last Wednesday night. Jordan's team needed him.

The Wildcats were losing by two points with a second left in the game and fate had put the ball in his hands. That's when Jordan did what had been preparing to do from the time he took his first steps. He squared his shoulders to the basket, took dead aim and let that ball fly.

His teammates and fans mobbed the young man when his three-point shot hit nothing but net as the buzzer sounded ending the game. Some people may have been surprised at how the game ended but not me. I've been watching Jordan make baskets for so long, I could never doubt him.

Newspapers are still alive and kicking

Major-metropolitan newspapers may be a slowly dying breed, but community newspapers prove that American journalism is alive, well and living in the rural areas, small towns and suburbs of our land.

The word “newspaper” may conjure mental images of a big pressroom, delivery trucks and eight-column banner headlines, but 97 percent of U.S. papers have a paid circulation of less than 50,000. Their combined circulations, though, exceed 109 million - more than three times the total of the big daily newspapers.

These are the community newspapers. They are staffed by professional journalists, but their news coverage is locally-oriented. High-school sports and academics, zoning issues, petty crime, neighborhood events, clubs, services, and milestones - this is the stuff that the local news beat is made of. It’s the sort of focus big-city papers have increasingly lacked both the time and the inclination to provide.

This single-minded dedication to meeting the needs of their audience has set the community papers apart from their big-city brethren. Major-metropolitan newspaper circulations began declining when they lost touch with readers and advertisers, long before the advent of the Internet. Today, the concentration on consumer demand distinguishes the community newspaper product from that of advocacy journalists and hyper-localists. The bond between the community papers and their readers is organic.

University of North Carolina journalism instructor and author Jock Lauterer summed up this relationship neatly: “Community journalism is the heartbeat of American journalism, journalism in its natural state.” That heart beats today as robustly as it did in 1953 when the little Tabor City Tribune (North Carolina) won a Pulitzer Prize for its expose of local Ku Klux Klan activities. It was the first Pulitzer award ever made to a weekly newspaper.

From Mankato, MN to Plano, TX; from Vienna, VA to Harrisonville, MO to Walnut Creek, CA, newspapers stand as testament to the continuing vitality of print journalism. Reports of the death of newspapers may be premature and are surely exaggerated.

David Hull helped woman in distress

Dear Editor:

Last Friday, about an hour or so before the storms rolled through our little corner of the world, my old friend, Linda Eckler, was in a one car accident on U.S. 42 near the Gallatin/Boone County line.

It appears she will be okay but she suffered several deep cuts on her face and some broken bones. She was able to get out of the Jeep and managed to get out of the creek and back to the roadside.

While standing by the roadside, eight or ten drivers drove right on by.

Finally, a pickup truck came into view and saw the muddled and blood-covered lady on the shoulder. He not only stopped, he summoned emergency crews and stayed until they arrived and Linda was on her way to the hospital. He even crawled down the creek bank to retrieve some personal items for Linda.

I am so pleased to report that the driver of the pickup was “Dr. Dirt”, a.k.a David Hull. I am so proud to call him my neighbor and so happy to call him my friend.

Kentucky Commentary

Our coal industry has gotten a bad rap

In Catch-22, author Joseph Heller wrote it was neither possible nor necessary to educate people who never questioned anything.

The “possible” part has me especially concerned when it comes to Kentucky’s coal industry.

This industry’s impact goes way beyond the 18,000 miners shoveling coal each day while making $70,000 a year and the three coal-industry jobs tied to each miner’s position.

Add up all of the residual effects and, according to the National Mining Association, you have 84,000 jobs supported by “black rock” – just in the commonwealth.

Environmental activists usually don’t deny the industry’s economic impact or that Kentucky needs good jobs. Yet they and their enablers never seem to get around to asking – or answering: If we use government’s regulatory process to deny permits and essentially besiege the coal industry until it starves to death or remains on life support – how will we turn on our lights, heat our homes, keep schools and churches open and fuel our businesses?

If more opponents of coal were at least giving the appearance of seriously grappling with that question, my level of concern might not be as high about the future of Kentucky’s greatest natural resource and one of its greatest economic assets.

Instead, it’s becoming so politically incorrect to speak of the coal industry and its benefits in any positive terms whatsoever that to even question the assumptions of those with anti-coal agendas clearly is taboo.

But since we’re much more concerned about factual – rather than political – correctness, I ask: What evidence do coal-bashers – including the Obama administration’s Environmental Protection Agency regulators – offer that alternative sources like solar and wind power can be produced in sufficient quantity at an efficient cost to meet rising energy demands?

It’s doubtful that many of the alternative sources being considered will ever produce the amount of energy needed to meet the expected 40-percent increase in electricity demand the United States will experience just within the next decade.

But coal bashers protest: If government would just make a sizeable “investment” (read: gobs of your tax dollars) in solar and wind power, we could keep the windmills turning and the sun from ever going down.

Sizeable investments have taken place. The Obama White House invested a half-billion public dollars in Solyndra LLC, a California-based solar panel manufacturer while promising that 4,000 new jobs would be created.

Not only did those jobs never materialize, the company went bust within two years of the $535 million loan guarantee. The slick photo-ops, complete with promises of “going green” politically benefited the administration – but not those who lost their jobs.

Kentucky’s coal industry, meanwhile, has demonstrated staying power for centuries. It has improved its safety and environmental record significantly while offering good jobs in the worst of economic times.

And since, as one wise sage put it, “truth fears no question,” I ask: What proven alternative exists that’s capable of meeting our increased energy demands with such an affordable price tag for the future?

Does this mean coal bashers are in a quandary – a “catch-22” situation, if you will?

Wildcat rally stuns Simon Kenton

Collins ends Gallatin's season

By Mark Gray
Sports Reporter

Gallatin County Wildcat basketball coach Jon Jones has won 304 games in his 18-year career. But none was more improbable than last Wednesday night's first round regional victory over Simon Kenton at Henry County High School.

Jones's undersized, scrappy team erased a 43-24 third quarter deficit to stun the Pioneers 56-55 on senior Jordan Morris' three-point basket at the buzzer.

Gallatin almost duplicated the feat in Monday's semifinal when they rallied against Martha Layne Collins, but came up short at the end.

Against Simon Kenton, the Cats grabbed an early 5-0 lead, but went scoreless the remainder of the quarter and trailed 9-5.

The Pioneers extended the lead to 23-9 but the Wildcats ended the half on a 8-0 run to pull within 23-17.

Gallatin's offensive woes continued in the third quarter and a 20-7 advantage by Simon Kenton pushed the lead to 43-24.

The Wildcats chipped away at the lead but still trailed 51-39 with under three minutes to play.

A pair of Travis Davis three-pointers wrapped around a Pioneer free throw made it 52-45. A Kristian Morgan steal and lay up pulled the Cats within 52-47 with 1:19 left.

Gallatin forced another turnover and Davis drained another from behind with arc with 1:19 to cut the lead to 52-50.

A pioneer bucket made it 54-50, but Jordan Morris' trifecta from the corner with 58 seconds trimmed the lead to 54-53.

After Simon Kenton missed two fouls shots, the Cats had two chances to take the lead, but could not convert.

Gallatin was forced to foul the Pioneers with nine seconds left. The first three throw was converted for a 55-53 lead, but the Cats rebounded on the miss and called time out with 7.8 seconds left.

Davis took the inbounds pass after the time-out and raced up court. He then found Morris along on the wing who calmly hit the game winner as time ran out.

Morris' basket sparked a wild celebration among fans and players.

Morgan led the Wildcats with 20 points and 14 rebounds; Davis added 14; Morris, 6; Zak Brown, 6; Nick Brown, 4; Elijah Ingram, 4; and Brady Hill, 2.

The victory put Gallatin into the semifinal round against Collins.

Once again, first quarter woes plagued the Wildcats. They trailed 13-1 after one quarter and 17-1 before they made their first field goal almost three minutes into the second quarter.

Gallatin then settled in, trailed 26-16 at halftime. The third quarter was played on even terms as Collins led 37-27 heading into the fourth quarter.

Kristian Morgan scored the Wildcats' first 11 points of the quarter and his three-pointer, with 3:40 left, cut the Titan lead to 41-38.

Collins scored the next six points, but Davis and Morgan both scored to cut the lead to 47-42.

Two Morgan free throws with 1:11 remaining got the Cats back within three points at 47-44.

The Titans extended the lead to 52-44 before Davis connected from long range with 29 seconds left to make it 52-47.

That would be Gallatin's last point, however, as Collins converted six straight free throws to make the final 58-47.

Morgan and Davis both scored 18 points for the Cats, who bow out with 22 wins and nine losses. Morris added 7 and Zak Brown, 4.

Collins advanced to face defending champion Oldham County, who defeated Owen 47-44 in the second semi-final.

Sports in Kentucky

A Churchill Downs stretch run measure for Kansas ... Syracuse ... North Carolina and Kentucky at mid-March?

Kentucky. A furlong back, Syracuse and North Carolina thisclose.

Length-and-a-half back – Kansas, a neck in front of Ohio State and Michigan State.

Transition defense aside, Kentucky's play at Florida Sunday was surgical, college hoops at its finest.

With run-the-table at stake, that Anthony Davis would even attempt a 3-pointer was entertaining for its audacity and told us he was thinking "watch this!" for national television.

That Kentucky crushed the heart out of Florida's Senior Day, did not sit well with some Sunshine state media.

As John Calipari's team ran up its SEC ownership flag, a volley or two was fired across Kentucky's bow. One was significant because of its source, another because of its folly and a third because of its stinging truth.

One-time candidate for the Kentucky job, Tom Izzo at Michigan

State weighed in on John Calipari's one-and-done model, telling Sports Illustrated in its Mar. 5 edition, "It (Kentucky) is like a factory. Nobody has any ties to the place."

Bingo. No UK fan I know cares a hoot about John Wall, DeMarcus Cousins and the rest who passed by to build a resume' on TV. That NBA rules and Calipari's use of them brings Ws to the Bluegrass has a hollow-ness and is clear evidence, that Izzo hit the nail squarely on its head.

Moreover, it gives license to someone named Michael Rosenberg (at SI) to write: "... he (Calipari) is hampered only by a fan base with two requests: win, and don't lose."

On the move

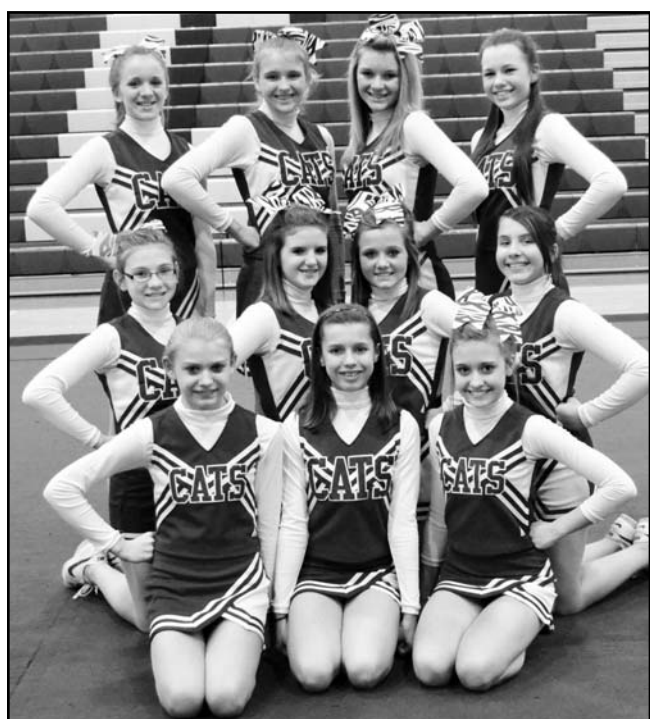

Kristian Morgan led the Wildcats with 20 points against Simon Kenton. He scored 18 points in the team's next game, a loss to Collins High School. Photo by Kelley Warnick

Here's the latest reported news from our friends and neighbors:

Autum Doolin celebrated her fourth birthday last week with family and friends. Her theme was the Disney Princesses. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AUTAUM!

Saturday night, Mae Wallace, Ruthie Niebergall, and Shirley Chipman attended the Spring Fling Concert at the Scenic View Church of Christ. Sunday dinner guests of Shirley Chipman were Lanette and Jama Morrison, Derina, Savannah, and Autum Doolin.

Mary Jane McCarty drove to LaGrange, Saturday evening, to meet her daughter, Meagan Marcum; Meagan's friend, Erin Stagner, and Erin's daughter, Harper. The four of them enjoyed dinner at the Cracker Barrel before going shopping.

Carol Estes and Joyce Ellis joined Matt, Laura, Luke and Noah Marksberry at Cheddars in Florence after church on Sunday to celebrate Laura's birthday. After their meal, they all went to Cold Stone Creamery to indulge in some ice cream. Everyone enjoyed the time together and the wonderful food. Sarah Marksberry had a birthday dinner prepared and waiting for her granddaughter, Laura Marksberry, after work on Monday. Joining them at the meal were Donny and Connie Marksberry, and Matt, Luke and Noah Marksberry. Sarah and Connie also baked a cake with homemade icing wishing Laura a Happy Birthday. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, LAURA!

Loren Roberts attended the "Cabin Fever" Rummage, Collectibles and Arts & Crafts Sale at Carrollton on Saturday. The sale was sponsored by the Carroll County Tobacco Festival. Afterwards, he visited Trader Baker's Flea Market and had dinner at New China.

Delores and Terry Hopperton enjoyed a nice Sunday afternoon. After church, they had family members Mishelle, Josh, and Kaleb Frontz, Brad, Jenny, Lila, Carter and Madelyn Hopperton for lunch, then all watched the UK game and played with the little ones. Delores described it as a fun way to spend a lovely Sunday afternoon.

Katie and Hardin Lowe held a belated birthday celebration at their home Sunday for two family members - son, Jason Lowe, and daughter-in-law, Letha Lowe. Other guests included Jason's wife, DeRhonda; their daughter, Jaye; Jaye's friend, Jordan Shelton; Jason and DeRhonda's son, Brayson; Brayson's friend, Danielle; Letha's husband, Nathan; their son, Logan; and friend Harrison; Katie and Hardin's daughter, Lora Beth Sadler, with her husband, Jeff, and their daughter, C.J.; and Hardin's brother and sister-in-law, Joe and Harriet Lowe. They all enjoyed dinner together, complete with ice cream and cake. HAPPY BIRTHDAY JASON AND LETHA!

Greg, Amy and Hayden Dickerson drove to Nashville on Thursday to the SEC Tournament to watch the UK Hoops girls' basketball team play on Friday and Saturday. The girls won Friday's game, but lost on Saturday to LSU. The UK Hoops team will go on to participate in the NCAA Tournament. Following Friday's game Amy, Greg, and Hayden were joined by Storm Dickerson and her mother, Penny Kohls; Storm's friends, Kayla Blevins of Kenton County and Jackie Marshall of Boone County for dinner at Jack's Barbecue. The Dickersons quite enjoyed their time in Nashville, eating out, shopping, and listening to the string bands on the street. When asked about the tornado that touched down near Nashville, Amy said they took shelter in the basement laundry room of the Marriott Inn where they were staying. They came home Saturday evening after the last game, tired but happy, and relieved to find no damage to their home.

Jacalyn, Cindy, and Olivia Williamson joined Jacalyn's third grade class for an evening at Chuck E. Cheese's last Tuesday. The class was being prepared for the outstanding achievement of their basketball team. The youngsters all had a great time and hope to do as well or better next year.

Anthony West and his friend, Jeremy Ewing, visited Betty and Boyd Lionberger, Saturday evening, to solicit a contribution for a very worthy cause. Anthony is involved in a mission for African Relief, sponsored by the Church of Christ in Glencoe, and has vowed to fast for 30 hours to promote this most important effort.

Patsy Brown is counting her blessings. The only storm damage she incurred was to her hardly-used camper, and the roof blown off the pole barn of the old factory.

Kara Herald and fiancé, Butch Casson, drove to the Lionberger home on Friday in order to take shelter from the impending tornado, but there was nobody home. Where were Betty and Boyd? Kara, who is Betty's niece, answered several phone calls from family members calling to check on them, but she could tell them nothing about the whereabouts of the missing couple. Where could they be?

Well now we have the answer: They had been out and about all day, and were driving to Florence, totally unaware of any storm warnings until they happened to hear the sirens just as they were crossing the Boone County line. Boyd turned on the radio to discover they were right in the path of the tornado! What to do? They kept on driving until they reached the Christmas Shop where Betty wanted to pick up decorations for St. Patrick's Day. Upon reaching the store, they found no customers and the employees all standing outside looking for the tornado. Betty and Boyd were offered shelter, but decided there was no immediate danger, and went on to have dinner at Steak & Shake before coming home to an empty house. They only later discovered that Kara and Butch had been there, and that family members were frantic about their whereabouts.

The saga of Bo Jangles the mouse continues: Bo Jangles has not yet surrendered his freedom in favor of security, despite all the heroic efforts to catch him. His cousin, Mickey, who is currently residing at my house, has just been served his eviction notice!

To all my friends who have e-mailed me about the presence of KU at my house nearly all day

Saturday, here is what happened: A large limb from my old oak tree fell, pulling down a power line as well as all the electric wires off my house. KU informed me that the wires on the house were a danger, not their responsibility, and they would have to turn my power off till I could get an electrician to fix the wiring. Many thanks to Darrell Maines for supplying me with the name of a licensed electrician; to Brian Richards, the very competent electrician who came to my aid; and to KU for restoring my power so quickly once the job was done. I am counting my blessings, as I'm sure we all are who escaped the devastation, even as our hearts go out to those who were not so fortunate.

More truth and consequences of nicotine addiction

March 21, 2012 is “Kick Butts Day”. We are trying to continue to remind you of the purpose of “Kick Butts Day” and that is to encourage our youth to remain tobacco free and, by doing so, they will never have to deal with the addictions of nicotine or the health risks that tobacco products can impose on the body.

We know that you have heard that using tobacco is unhealthy, but do you know that smoking cigarettes can damage almost every organ in your body?

Consider some of the health problems that are caused by smoking.

Smoking can cause cancer of the mouth and throat, voice box, esophagus, lungs, pancreas, bladder, kidneys and stomach. If that were not enough, it can also add to your health issues with problems such as stroke, cataracts, gum disease, pneumonia, bronchitis, emphysema, chronic cough, heart disease and hardening of the arteries, which affects blood flow.

Is it really worth the risk? That is the truth and now you know the consequences.

Are your footsteps worth following?

News from Gallatin Health Care

By Mary Ann Dopf

Visiting Gallatin Health Care on Sunday afternoon was like going to a family reunion for me. I had not been to the center for sometime and it was so good to see all my friends and to see some new ones there as well.

I started my visit in the 100 hall where Audrey Hammond had just finished his dinner. He was bragging about the chicken, mashed potatoes, and carrots. He had eaten just about all of it as I sat down to spend a couple of minutes with him. It is always a pleasure talking with Audrey, he always has a great attitude. He said Jeff would be stopping by around 3:00 and he looks forward to his visits everyday.

I stopped in to see Eileen Reed who is just right across the hall a little bit and her room was filled with some family members. Her grandson, Nick, his wife, Amy, and their children, Zachary and Sarah, were there visiting. I stayed after her family left and enjoyed so much talking to her. She had fallen and broken her hip so she is there for rehab. She is so happy to be close to home.

I stopped to see Darrell Jewell and had a belated Christmas present for him. I gave him three super hero books. He was so glad to get them. I stood the Superman, Batman, and Spiderman books on his TV stand so he could look at them later.

Mrs. Athea Fern was sitting in her room watching TV as I entered her room. She always has a big smile on her face and so happy to see me.

I saw that Margaret Craig was sleepy but Barb Beagle was there to be with her sister, as she always is, but today she was watching those Cats beat the Gators. We chatted a bit then I left to continue making my visits.

Seeing Mrs. William Olivigni in the hall always sends a big smile my way when I say Hi Granny!!! Sitting next to her was Lee Burgett who was crowned The Valentine Queen. I congratulated her and she gave me a big grin. Jim Walker was crowned The King but I did not see him on this visit. I spoke to Gene Mark Wilson’s stepdad and offered him a couple of bananas when a few of his family members appeared. Donnie Jones was watching TV as well and gave me the final score of the Kentucky game.

Jerry Lusby was sitting in his room and we spoke of his mother and sister as we always do. Jerry is a fine gentleman. I then stopped to see Marcla Hutchinson and give her some extra treats with her bananas. I sat and we talked about what I had been doing and she was so excited to hear all about my new business venture. She was so glad to be feeling well after a bout with the stomach bug.

Mrs. Thelma Setters was sitting by her window watching the birds. Her room is full of bird figurines spring is her favorite time of year.

Mrs. Virginia Wash was sleeping and always wants me to wake her. I started not to but then I did and managed to see a smile and she moved her lips saying my name. I have had some great visits with this lady. I sat and spent some quiet time with her recalling some of my conversations with her. Such a great lady who loves her family so much. As I approached the end of that hall, church services were being conducted by Brother Patterson from Bramlette Baptist. There was a great gathering with great singing. The residents know their songs. I love hearing them sing. I then made it to the 200 hall to see Lula Hensley, Linda Hicks, Linda Beach and Louise Gibson. All of these ladies were glad to see me and get some treats. I then helped Louise to the dining room for supper. I got there shortly after 1:00 and by 4 :45 all 30 lbs. of my bananas were gone.

What a great day I had visiting but sad as well. I miss Louise Sullivan, Evelyn Young, and Anne Bethel. These three ladies have been here for my visits for many years. I think and look back over the six years plus I have been making these visits and this visit today is by far so very different without these ladies. I have grown attached to so many who have gone on to Heaven but today I was in limbo at times. These residents are my friends and I truly cherish my time with them.

A mother’s baby was taken;

A dad’s little boy isn’t here,

Little brother’s heart is now breaking

For the one he loved more each year.

Life was so good and so happy

For little boys running at play,

Now many lives have been shaken

By this tragedy on that one day.

Time was short, but he touched more

Than some who are wrinkled and gray.

His eyes and his spirit were gentle

Giving smiles that spoke volumes each day.

We’ll never know all the answers,

We can question till eternity rolls,

But God uses death to remind us,

That He is the one in control.

We’re thankful that we knew Boogie,

And even though his life is gone,

In the hearts of all those who loved him

His memory will keep living on.

In precious memories

By Rose Allen

Staying Motivated - Sticking with your Exercise Routine

Perhaps you have tried an exercise program for a few weeks or even months but eventually lost interest and stopped. This is not an uncommon problem. Thankfully there are several ways you can stay motivated:

-Reflect on why you stopped - If you have tried an exercise routine several times and never been able to stick with it, think about why. What about the change made it too hard to stick with? Did it take too long to go to the gym and get home in time for dinner, or was it something else? Recognize the reason for stopping before and think about how you can work around that.

-Be realistic - If you have never run a day in your life, do you think it would be reasonable to run 1 mile on the first time out? If you do think it would be reasonable, then you may want to reflect on the goals that you are setting for yourself. You may think that aiming high is a great way to get started. If you make high goals and do not quite achieve them, you are more likely to be more upset than if you have not made your goal at all. Instead, create small weekly goals that will eventually lead to your bigger one.

-Get Excited! - If you are not excited about your activity, you will probably not be sticking with it very long. Look at what it is that you enjoy and what can help you learn to love your exercise. Do you have great music that you listen to when you are active? Perhaps you get to watch a TV show while you are on the treadmill that you would not normally get to watch. Whatever it is that makes you excited to get active - use that to help you when you are starting to have second thoughts.

-Try something new - If you have been doing the same activity at the same speed for weeks and weeks it is likely that you will get bored with it. Add a little variety or try something completely different and new. Staying interested in what you are doing is a great way to make sure that you keep going.

Remember that we have a group that meets every Monday-Wednesday-Friday at the Extension office at 11:00 a.m. for about 45 minutes. A majority of the movements are done while sitting in a chair. Feel free to join in when you can.

The Zumba group is also continuing to meet on Tuesday's at 6:30 p.m. This group is hoping to move back to the Lower Elementary gym this month. Contact Yolande Crist-Sellers at 859-912-3568 for details.

Ask Doctor Dirt...

By David Hull

farmers are not aware of a lot of new research and good agricultural practices that are considered common knowledge in more traditional grain-producing areas.

To address some of these topics, a meeting has been scheduled on Tuesday, Mar 27, at 7pm at the Gallatin Co Extension Office just west of Warsaw on U.S. 42. If you have just started raising a grain crop in the past few years, consider making plans to attend this meeting.

Doctor Dirt is really David Hull, Gallatin County Extension Agent for Agriculture. If you have farm or garden questions, stop by or call the Extension Office at 567-5481. Or, email him at dhull@uky.edu.

BACKYARD POULTRY BASICS

Ever wanted to keep a small flock of chickens so you could have farm fresh eggs? Hey, who hasn't? Fresh eggs look better, taste better, and are better for you than most anything you can get elsewhere. Then what's stopping you?

On Tuesday, March 13th, 6:30 PM at the Gallatin County Extension Office, we'll be hosting a free program called "Backyard Poultry Basics". And believe me, by programs end, you'll be ready and able to start your own backyard flock (even if your backyard is on the small side).

At this program, you'll learn how to feed, house, and generally take care of a small flock. Also at this meeting, Doctor Dirt will be unveiling his super top-secret Chicken Tractor! You certainly don't want to miss that!

To register for this free program, call the Gallatin County Extension Office at 567-5481. Or, if you want to email me, you can do so at dhull@uky.edu.

TRI-COUNTY TOBACCO PRODUCTION UPDATE

An update meeting is scheduled for those planning on raising tobacco this coming year. Topics will focus on new varieties, fertilizer application, managing diseases and suggested good agricultural practices.

The meeting will be held on Tuesday, Mar 20, at 6:30 at the Jonesville Firehouse. A chili supper will be provided, so pre-registration is needed from the Grant Co Extension Office (859-824-3355.)

KSP to help storm victims

In the wake of the severe weather and tornado outbreaks across Kentucky, KSP posts and headquarters will serve as designated drop off sites for items needed in devastated communities. The need has arisen for a reputable location that citizens feel comfortable leaving donations, knowing they will reach the people in most need. This will also limit the number of people traveling into these stricken areas (to deliver items) allowing first responders more access to people in need.

Items will be evenly distributed to all communities impacted. Collection of items will this week and continue through Sunday, March 10. Monetary donations are not encouraged through us. Anyone who wishes to contribute monetarily should contact an organization such as the Red Cross.

We've compiled a list of resources for the recovery effort and they are listed below:
